

COE Summer Fieldwork Fund

2008 - 2009

We are now accepting applications for the Council on Archaeological Studies (CAS) funds for summer fieldwork. The funds are intended primarily for undergraduate Archaeological Studies majors seeking to fulfill their summer fieldwork requirement. Others may be considered mainly if they are accompanying CAS faculty on their summer projects. CAS registered M.A. and Anthropology Ph.D. students in the archaeology subfield may also apply for funding for projects related to their theses/dissertations.

You must provide the following information as part of your application:

1. Applicants must complete the Albers-Coe-Hazard Application, 2008-2009, which summarizes their proposal. The signature of the applicant's Director of Undergraduate Studies or dissertation/thesis/essay advisor is required.
2. Attach proposal containing:
 - a. a brief, narrative description of the project or field school, listing its dates and describing the fieldwork and other experiences you will undertake;
 - b. within the same text, an indication of how this project or field school will further your archaeological skills and (if applicable) preparation for the senior essay or thesis/dissertation;
 - c. a detailed, itemized budget including all travel and other fieldwork costs for which you are requesting assistance.

*Please note that award funds are considered to be taxable income.

Be sure to indicate if you are a declared Archaeological Studies major and your year of graduation. Any change in the scope or budget of the project after submission should be reported to the council/department office immediately. If funding is awarded to you, a paragraph of your research must be reported to the department/council office within 90 days after the completion of your fieldwork.

Typically, the COE Fund pays for travel expenses, and only additional costs if there is enough funding available. You may ask for support beyond travel, but be aware that this may or may not be awarded.

All majors should speak to the DUS of CAS or Department of Anthropology about their choices before applying to formulate the most appropriate field experience.

Responsibility for the selection of recipients resides with the Chairman of the Council on Archaeological Studies who has appointed an advisory committee to assist with the decision process.

The application should be submitted either personally or placed in the mailboxes at the department of
