

April 2, 2009

To Yale Students in American Studies, Sociology, African-American Studies and Anthropology,

Before our registration site is opened to the general public, we are offering you the opportunity to register to attend one of three roundtables on Friday, May 1st.

Roundtable 1: Melissa Fay Greene, Creative Non-Fiction
Roundtable 2: Carol Stack, Doing Public Anthropology
Roundtable 3: John Jackson, Jr., Media and Ethnography

Seating at the roundtables is limited to 15 students each. Please visit the American Studies website to register for a roundtable.

ALL OUR KIN:
A Conference in Honor of Carol Stack

This spring marks the 35th anniversary of the publication of All Our Kin, Carol Stack's path-breaking ethnography of the survival strategies of African-American women living in poverty in urban America. A conference honoring the legacy of Stack's work will be held at Yale University May 1-2, 2009. We will be celebrating more than three decades of Stack's contribution to ethnography as a method of critical inquiry into the social conditions and public policies that shape people's everyday lives.

For information about speakers and conference registration, please visit our website <http://www.yale.edu/amstud/aok/index.html>.

Seating is limited to 15 participants per roundtable. To ensure a seat you MUST register within the next few days. Lunch will be served. You may register for the conference and roundtables at
