

TROPICAL RESOURCES

The Bulletin of the Yale Tropical Resources Institute

2007 Volume 26

In This Issue

About TRI

- 2 Mission Statement and Vision
- 3 From the Editors: Alicia Calle and Colleen Morgan
- 5 News and Updates
- 6 2006 TRI Fellows map

Articles

- 7 Implementation of Conservation Approaches in Human-Dominated Landscapes: The Path of the Tapir Biological Corridor Case Study, Costa Rica
Alvaro Redondo-Brenes, MFS 2006
- 15 Wildlife Management Areas in Madang Lagoon, Papua New Guinea: Creating or Claiming?
Catherine Benson, MESC 2007
- 21 Watershed Protection for Ecosystem Services in the Makira Forest Area, Madagascar
Jessica Albietz, MEM 2006
- 31 Management Strategies and Institutional Barriers: An Analysis of Public-Private Partnerships in Water Management in Metro Manila, Philippines
Kate Neville, MESC 2007
- 36 Sticky Methods, Social Frictions and Advocacy: The Researcher Inside Social Movements
Brandon C. Whitney, MESC 2007
- 41 Peri-Urban Identity in Amazônia: Forgotten Component of Local Development
Jennifer Lewis, joint MA-MEM 2008
- 47 Effects of Indoor Particulate Matter Pollution from Biomass Fuels Burning: A Case Study in Six Shenyang Households, Northeastern China in Summer Season
Ruoting Jiang, MESC 2007
- 55 Armed Conflict and its Impact on Community Forestry in Nepal
Krishna B. Roka, MF 2007
- 63 Himalayan Viagra, Himalayan Gold? Cordyceps sinensis brings new forces to the Bhutanese Himalaya
Rachelle Gould, MESC 2007
- 70 Announcing the TRI 2007-2008 Fellows

In order to view maps, graphs, photographs, and figures in color, please access the 2007 Bulletin at www.yale.edu/tri/bulletin.html