

Migration, Politics and Population

A Seminar Series Winter/Spring 2008

"I'm afraid you have humans."

Sponsored by:

The Interdisciplinary Bioethics Center & The Yale Institute for Biospheric Studies

Location: Trumbull College, Seminar Room
241 Elm Street, New Haven, CT

Thursday, January 24, 2008 – 12 NOON

Stathis Kalyvas, Department of Political Science, Yale University
War and population movements

Thursday, February 7, 2008 – 12 NOON

Uli Mayer, Department of Sociology, Yale University
Life Courses in the Transformation of East Germany – the Contribution of Social Demography to the Study of System Disruption

Thursday, February 21, 2008 – 12 NOON

Jasmina Besirevic-Regan, Trumbull College, Yale University
The Ethnic Cleansing of Banja Luka: National Homogenization, Political Repression and the Emergence of a Bosnian Muslim Refugee Community

Thursday, February 28, 2008 – 12 NOON

Michael White, Department of Sociology, Brown University
The New American Immigration: Success or Segmentation?

March 6, 2008 – 4:30 PM

Khachig Tololyan, Department of English, Wesleyan University
The Armenian Diaspora

Thursday, March 27, 2008 – 12 NOON

Matt Connelly, Department of History, Columbia University
Unnatural Selection

